ABOUT THE PRESENTER

Charles W. "Chick" Keller has 30 years experience working with engineering, construction, and information technology firms in high level management and leadership roles. He has worked in senior management positions for Black and Veatch, a global construction firm, and United Telecom (now Sprint). Keller is a retired professor from the University of Kansas where he taught courses in strategy, capital budgeting, project management, and leadership.

In 2004 Keller was Program Management Director for the reconstruction program in Iraq. The program consisted of 2,500 projects spread across various sectors, such as: electrical, oil, public works and water, roads, education, health, security, and communications. He was responsible for managing several engineering firms and design build contractors who were executing the $12.4B construction program. For his efforts in Iraq, Keller was awarded the Joint Civilian Service Commendations Medal.
